GIN CATERGORIES

CLASSIC

London Dry and Modern Dry Styles. Juniper dominant and containing classic, modern and local botanicals. All botanical flavour must be imparted through distillation only. The addition of sweetner or sugar is prohibited.

CONTEMPORARY

Contemporary Gins are gins which have a predominant flavour of anything other than juniper. Juniper is always present, but the gin overall may have a character which emphasizes other botanicals.

PINK

Pink gin is normal gin that has been flavoured with fruits. It has no added sugar and contains the same alcohol by volume. However, red or pink fruits like strawberries, raspberries or red currents are added.

NAVY STRENGTH

Can be made in a classic or contemporary style. Proofed at the higher ABV of 57% or above.

FLAVOURED

Gins which add a “signature botanical” after distillation, often through maceration or other means. These gins often have a colour or hue from the added ingredients. The second kind of flavoured gin is a contemporary style which refers to its predominant note as its flavour.

SLOE

Sloe gin is a British red liqueur made with gin and sloes. Sloes are the fruit (drupe) of Prunus spinosa, a relative of the plum. Sloe gin has an ABV between 15 and 30 percent. The traditional way of making sloe gin is to soak the sloes in gin.

AGED

Gins which have been aged in wood after distillation.

ALCOHOL FREE

Distilled without the presence of alcohol.
